Contributor

Azure Blob Storage, Azure File Share, and Azure Data Lake store connection strings and shared access keys in the connection `extra` JSON under keys that were not matched by the existing sensitive field patterns. This allowed users with read-only Connection permissions (e.g. Viewer role) to retrieve these secrets in plaintext via the API.

Adding `connection_string` and `access_key` to the default set ensures these values are automatically redacted in API responses and logs. (cherry picked from commit 6d9d86c)
